

The Honey Dewdrops

These Old Roots

"Their talent is such that it's quite possible that a new band recording in the year 2020 might cite the Honey Dewdrops as a prime influence."

- Bluegrass Unlimited

Radio release: October 1, 2010

File under: Folk / Roots / Americana

TRACK LISTING

1. Amaranth (3:11)
2. Test of Time (3:37)
3. Nobody in this World (4:13)
4. Goodbye and Farewell (3:27)
5. Can't Get a Letter from Home (2:54)
6. Sweet Heaven (3:02)
7. Waiting On You (3:55)
8. Only You Can Know (3:38)
9. Way Back When (3:36)
10. That Good Old Way (3:13)

All songs by Laura Wortman and Kagey Parrish except "Can't Get a Letter from Home", a traditional from the singing of Addie Graham from Magoffin County, Kentucky.

Engineered, mixed, and mastered by The Honey Dewdrops

CONTACT INFO

Radio & Press Distribution / Booking

Jared Ingersol Music Management
(314) 266-1870
jared@jaredingersol.com
www.jaredingersol.com

Artist

The Honey Dewdrops
www.thehoneydewdrops.com

Laura Wortman and Kagey Parrish are The Honey Dewdrops: an award winning, nationally touring husband and wife folk duet who perform fresh, original songs focusing on vocal harmonies and tight instrumentation. Influenced by traditional Appalachian music as well as contemporary singer-songwriters, The Honey Dewdrops blend old styles with new, creating music that is powerful and heartfelt.

"If the Sun Will Shine," their debut record, was released in 2009 to critical acclaim and was #2 for two consecutive months on Folk DJ Radio in early 2010.

Their second album, "These Old Roots," has just been released. Like their debut, it is a tribute to the way music was recorded before overdubs and tracking. "We wanted that sound and feeling to come through in each of the songs here. For this session, the microphones were set up, we gathered around them and played each song, and then we picked the take that sounded the best. We've tried as much as possible to leave it at that," says the duo from Charlottesville, Virginia. "The songs in this collection encompass so much of what we love about traditional southern mountain music- the earthy singing, the haunting guitar melody, the message the song delivers. We're drawn in. We hope that you are drawn too."

The Dewdrops are "A Prairie Home Companion"'s 2008 talent show winners and were finalists in the 2009 Mountain Stage NewSong competition. They have been selected as official showcase artists at the 2011 International Folk Alliance Conference.