Legendary Nashville songwriter Roger Miller once wrote about what happens "When Two Worlds Collide," but even though, at first glance, the progressive British rock of the Moody Blues and the all-star bluegrass lineup paying tribute to that music may seem worlds apart, the harmonious results, Moody Bluegrass Two...Much Love, prove they're really parallel universes.

Following 2004's critically and commercially acclaimed tribute to the legendary Moody Blues, the GRAMMY nominated Moody Bluegrass, along with the highly successful Moody Bluegrass Live, Nashville's finest have come together again to honor the Moody Blues. Producer David Harvey returns for this second volume, which perfectly blends the brilliant songwriting of the Moody Blues with the bluegrass sounds of mandolins, banjos and even clogging. The record spans the entire Moody Blues catalogue, and includes fan favorites such as "Tuesday Afternoon" and "I Know You're Out There."

Moody Bluegrass Two...Much Love translates the Moody Blues' original songs seamlessly, and much like the first bluegrass tribute, the beauty of the original Moody Blues music shines. There are stellar performances from Vince Gill, Ricky Skaggs, Carl Jackson, Tim O'Brien, Peter Rowan, Sam Bush, Larry Cordle, Jon Randall, the late Harley Allen, and more. They are surrounded by the best-of-the-best musicians, engineers and vocalists.

For the first time in over 30 years, all five Moody Blues members perform on the same album; Justin Hayward, John Lodge and Graeme Edge are joined by retired members Ray Thomas and Mike Pinder.

With Moody Bluegrass Two...Much Love, the worlds of bluegrass and progressive rock don't collide, they combine, finding common ground in perfect harmony.
